Charts updated through: 03/

These EUR/USD charts are based on Phillip Nels' 4 hour MACD strategy posted on the Forex Factory. These charts are intended to be used as a reference for what happened in the past when the 4 hour MACD histogram bar was higher or lower than the previous bar; from green to red or red to green. The 4 hour charts have the date and the time when the change occurred. My broker's (FXDD) server time is GMT + 2 so if you use a different broker, then your charts will look different. These charts should still be useable as a study guide or reference to what happened in the past. The 1 hour charts show the same time and date reference when the MACD histogram bar changed on the 4 hour charts. The moving averages should be self explanatory. The 89ma is represented by a long dashed line to make it easier to see on the charts.

There are no trendlines, chart formations, or price channels drawn on the charts. Since everybody may draw those a little differently and price/quote feeds differ from broker to broker, these were left out to keep the charts as basic as possible with the 4 hour strategy.

FXDD Chart Time	Eastern Standard Time USA

A lot of economic news is released at 8:30am EST USA which is 15:30 on FXDD's charts. The 4 hour candle that 'includes' that news release is the 12:00 candle since that candle is from 12:00 to 16:00. The following candle, 16:00, is from 16:00 to 20:00. I just thought that I would mention that because markets can be flat before releases then quite volatile after the release so if there are a few candles that are quite small or large around those times then there was most likely an economic news release that came out above or below what the market expected.

At the end of each month, or close to it, I'll re-post the pdf with the updated 4 hour and 1 hour charts. For what it's worth, I've got two sets of 4 hour and 1 hour charts running on MT4 at the same time. One set has a white background and the other has a black background. The white background charts are easier to print out and make notes on while the black background charts are easier on the eyes for some of those early hours.

I want to thank Phillip for making it easier for me to 'see' the charts with this strategy so this is my way of giving something back. I hope this is useful to some other traders as well.

Good Trades To All,
