{quote} Brother Davit, I always support synergy in traders genuine communication and friendship. Trading as a group or team makes it more meaningful, powerful and successful. Trading and life is always to be competitive I live in the opposite of the globe and we have different time zones, we can be providing information for each party to work on for the trades. Or even reminding one another on major events that can affect trading probabilities. By pooling resources, I believe, the trading distance can be further reached. We may not have "inside"...

Congrats for great successful trading specially on GU

The point I have been making here is that one does not have to be all over the map trading 16pairs. Your GU example is perfect that 1 pair on 5-10 positions is equal to 5-10 pairs traded with 1 position each. So its not about how many pairs but execution of 1 great trade.

Continue piling those greenies 🙌

Thanks Davit for such a good thread. I have previously got to know about TDI with EMA from a thread in Forexfactory called another simple system created by Arjun with nickname loveevery1. I am not sure Arjun-LE1 is the person as loveevery1 or just a follower. Patchiko was also one of the contributor there. Anyway, I appreciate more on Davit's strategy, maybe because after few years struggling in forex. I will keep following this thread and hope to contribute in this thread too.

You welcome TZIN

I find key survival in this business is keeping lots small. This allows relax mind, no panic and focused trading without worrying about every 20pip spike.

Patience. You may not get your result right away but wait. Check out CNTtrader here at FF. Sometimes holds positions for weeks to get the result.

EG for example I predicted going to 84 and it has but being patient is different mindset.

Patience is part of trading psychology. Regards

Here is my August results

My goal is solid 10% a month and everything more is gravy. Hit August +15.5% Since beginning of the year I have had no red month! and consistently hit above 10%! In fact I have offered privately on numerous accusations to trade other people money or sell signals which both I refused. Anyway I am sure there are others here who made bigger return in August like Pipssniper ,Mch1970 40+% Arjun and others. Yellow is when I took the losses and I am happy with winning %

I do carry reasonable amount of DD and as long as its less then 10% account then its acceptable in my book since most times things take little longer to reach target.Example EG took almost a month to drop to 84 however those shorts did pay!!!So DD by itself is part of trading.If you manage your lots properly one can trade with DD with confidence.

You welcome! practice on demo but you won't learn much from it.Trade mini lots in real money so you can train your mind as well.

Trading mostly is about big players trying to break brains and wallets by pushing pairs to extremes however whoever is tough survives.Tough both mentally and clever manipulation of lot sizes.Keep those lots small.Think of army you always want reserves

Hi Davit Wow !!! I woke this morning and found that it had all come together for my UC, NC and EC. Was so excited I closed all of the positions before the spreads began went crazy at 7 am Eastern Ausie time. I forgot to take a snapshot of the trades. I am sorry for that Davit but managed to make $308 of real money on 3 these trades. Great start for the month of September. If you are down in Aussie again you will have a place to stay if you are in beautiful Queensland. It is fantastic to see that the Davit school of learning is getting new pupils...

Great job but you do realize you took way too many losses unnecessarily on UC in great spot like 3104 3103 and so on.

Looks like you got out early as well.

Overall great start for Sept. Just keep in mind that I sense the reason you closed those trades early because your lots were big so you panicked...and closed perfectly well placed trades...that's my reading on your trading by simply looking at your closed trades.

By simply reducing your lots you could of ride that baby 90pips south all of them without stress or worry! Anyway thanks for the invitation and I will keep it in my head 😊

I keep rereading and rereading "Trading in the Zone" by Mark Douglas Reason is every chapter is simply gold nuggets.

He highly influenced how I trade. He made me understand what true probability is and sample size (one needs large sample size to test how successful my system is hence "trying" out short time is futile

CHAPTER 7

THE TRADER'S EDGE: THINKING IN PROBABILITIES

Exactly what does it mean to think in probabilities, and why is it so essential to one's consistent success as a trader? If you take a moment and analyze the last sentence, you will notice that I made consistency a function of probabilities. It sounds like a contradiction: How can someone produce consistent results from an event that has an uncertain probabilistic outcome? To answer this question, all we have to do is look to the gambling industry. Corporations spend vast amounts of money, in the hundreds of millions, if not billions, of dollars, on elaborate hotels to attract people to their casinos.

If you've been to Las Vegas you know exactly what I am talking about. Gaming corporations are just like other corporations, in that they have to justify how they allocate their assets to a board of directors and ultimately to their stockholders. How do you suppose they justify spending vast sums of money on elaborate hotels and casinos, whose primary function is to generate revenue from an event that has a purely random outcome?

PROBABILITIES PARADOX: RANDOM OUTCOME, CONSISTENT RESULTS

Here's an interesting paradox. Casinos make consistent profits day after day and year after year, facilitating an event that has a purely random outcome. At the same time, most traders believe that the outcome of the market's behavior is not random, yet can't seem to produce consistent profits. Shouldn't a consistent, nonrandom outcome produce consistent results, and a random outcome produce random, inconsistent results? What casino owners, experienced gamblers, and the best traders understand that the typical trader finds difficult to grasp is: even that have probable outcomes can produce consistent results, if you can get the odds in your favor and there is a large enough sample size.

The best traders

treat trading like a numbers game, similar to the way in which casinos and professional gamblers approach gambling. To illustrate, let's look at the game of blackjack. In blackjack, the casinos have approximately a 4.5-percent edge over the player, based on the rules they require players to adhere to.

This means that, over a large enough sample size (number of hands played), the casino will generate net profits of four and a half cents on every dollar wagered on the game. This average of four and a half cents takes into account all the players who walked away big winners (including all winning streaks), all the players who walked away big losers, and everybody in between. At the end of the day, week, month, or year, the casino always ends up with approximately 4.5 percent of the total amount wagered.

That 4.5 percent might not sound like a lot, but let's put it in perspective. Suppose a total of $100 million dollars is wagered collectively at all of a casino's blackjack tables over the course of a year. The casino will net $4.5 million. What casino owners and professional gamblers understand about the nature of probabilities is that each individual hand played is statistically independent of every other hand. This means that each individual hand is a unique event, where the outcome is random relative to the last hand played or the next hand played. If you focus on each hand individually, there will be a random, unpredictable distribution between winning and losing hands. But on a collective basis, just the opposite is true. If a large enough number of hands is played, patterns will emerge that produce a consistent, predictable, and statistically reliable outcome.

Here's what makes thinking in probabilities so difficult. It requires two layers of beliefs that on the surface seem to contradict each other. We'll call the first layer the micro level. At this level, you have to believe in the uncertainty and unpredictability of each individual hand. You know the truth of this uncertainty, because there are always a number of unknown variables affecting the consistency of the deck that each new hand is drawn from. For example, you can't know in advance how any of the other participants will decide to play their hands, since they can either take or decline additional cards. Any variables acting on the consistency of the deck that can't be controlled or known in advance will make the outcome of any particular hand both uncertain and random (statistically independent) in relationship to any other hand. The second layer is the macro level. At this level, you have to believe that the outcome over a series of hands played is relatively certain and predictable. The degree of certainty is based on the fixed or constant variables that are known in advance and specifically designed to give an advantage (edge) to one side or the other.

The constant variables I am referring to are the rules of the game. So, even though you don't or couldn't know in advance (unless you are psychic) the sequence of wins to losses, you can be relatively certain that if enough hands are played, whoever has the edge will end up with more wins than losses. The degree of certainty is a function of how good the edge is. It's the ability to believe in the unpredictability of the game at the micro level and simultaneously believe in the predictability of the game at the macro level that makes the casino and the professional gambler effective and successful at what they do. Their belief in the uniqueness of each hand prevents them from engaging in the pointless endeavor of trying to predict the outcome of each individual hand. They have learned and completely accepted the fact that they don't know what's going to happen next. More important, they don't need to know in order to make money consistently.

Because they don't have to know what's going to happen next, they don't place any special significance, emotional or otherwise, on each individual hand, spin of the wheel, or roll of the dice. In other words, they're not encumbered by unrealistic expectations about what is going to happen, nor are their egos involved in a way that makes them have to be right. As a result, it's easier to stay focused on keeping the odds in their favor and executing flawlessly, which in turn makes them less susceptible to making costly mistakes.

They stay relaxed because they are committed and willing to let the probabilities (their edges) play themselves out, all the while knowing that if their edges are good enough and the sample sizes are big enough, they will come out net winners. The best traders use the same thinking strategy as the casino and professional gambler. Not only does it work to their benefit, but the underlying dynamics supporting the need for such a strategy are exactly the same in trading as they are in gambling.

A simple comparison between the two will demonstrate this quite clearly. First, the trader, the gambler, and the casino are all dealing with both known and unknown variables that affect the outcome of each trade or gambling event. In gambling, the known variables are the rules of the game. In trading, the known variables (from each individual trader's perspective) are the results of their market analysis.

Market analysis finds behavior patterns in the collective actions of everyone participating in a market.

We know that individuals will act the same way under similar situations and circumstances, over and over again, producing observable patterns of behavior. By the same token, groups of individuals interacting with one another, day after day, week after week, also produce behavior patterns that repeat themselves. These collective behavior patterns can be discovered and identified by analytical tools such as trend lines, moving averages, oscillators, or retracements, just to name a few of the thousands that are available to any trader. Each analytical tool uses a set of criteria to define the boundaries of each behavior pattern identified. The set of criteria and the boundaries identified are the trader's known market variables. They are to the individual trader what the rules of the game are to the casino and gambler. By this I mean, the trader's analytical tools are the known variables that put the odds of success (the edge) for any given trade in the trader's favor, in the same way that the rules of the game put the odds of success in favor of the casino. Second, we know that in gambling a number of unknown variables act on the outcome of each game. In blackjack, the unknowns are the shuffling of the deck and how the players choose to play their hands. In craps, it's how the dice are thrown. And in roulette, it's the amount of force applied to spin the wheel. All these unknown variables act as forces on the outcome of each individual event, in a way that causes each event to be statistically independent of any other individual event, thereby creating a random distribution between wins and losses. Trading also involves a number of unknown variables that act on the outcome of any particular behavior pattern a trader may identify and use as his edge. In trading, the unknown variables are all other traders who have the potential to come into the market to put on or take off a trade. Each trade contributes to the market's position at any given moment, which means that each trader, acting on a belief about what is high and what is low, contributes to the collective behavior pattern that is displayed at that moment. If there is a recognizable pattern, and if the variables used to define that pattern conform to a particular trader's definition of an edge, then we can say that the market is offering the trader an opportunity to buy low or sell high, based on the trader's definition. Suppose

the trader seizes the opportunity to take advantage of his edge and puts on a trade. What factors will determine whether the market unfolds in the direction of his edge or against it? The answer is: the behavior of other traders!

At the moment he puts a trade on, and for as long as he chooses to stay in that trade, other traders will be participating in that market. They will be acting on their beliefs about what is high and what is low.

At any given moment, some percentage of other traders will contribute to an outcome favorable to our traders edge, and the participation of some percentage of traders will negate his edge. There's no way to know in advance how everyone else is going to behave and how their behavior will affect his trade, so the outcome of the trade is uncertain.

The fact is, the outcome of every (legal) trade that anyone decides to make is affected in some way by the subsequent behavior of other traders participating in that market, making the outcome of all trades uncertain. Since all trades have an uncertain outcome, then like gambling, each trade has to be statistically independent of the next trade, the last trade, or any trades in the future, even though the trader may use the same set of known variables to identify his edge for each trade.

Furthermore, if the outcome of each individual trade is statistically independent of every other trade, there must also be a random distribution between wins and losses in any given string or set of trades, even though the odds of success for each individual trade may be in the traders favor.

Third, casino owners don't try to predict or know in advance the outcome of each individual event.

Aside from the fact that it would be extremely difficult, given all the unknown variables operating in each game, it isn't necessary to create consistent results. Casino operators have learned that all they have to do is keep the odds in their favor and have a large enough sample size of events so that their edges have ample opportunity to work.

Too many great chapters in fact the whole book is amazing to me. Please read it. You will become better trader

Worrying and stressing is result of position size as you probably figured out correctly hence why I stress small lots so you can take trades in confidence based on the EDGE of this system by large enough sample size which naturally will take time minimum 3 months.

I can not possibly cover years of experience in one post. There are times I take the risk like Friday because summer generally not hiring months then we had floods in Louisiana on historical record level not seen in thousand years so probability of that number being red was great and forecast was red as well.

There are times when I stay on sidelines on news like interest rate decisions etc.

In most simple terms if you feel "afraid" from the market then please don't place trades. That mindset is exactly what you don't need in trading.

When you feel confident and good then place your high probable trade and let the trade be.

good source of business news is Bloomberg which I use a lot plus their live TV is great. FF news is decent as well depending on quality of articles submitted.

Hi Tx15

I like your progress here and please do continue. One observation you can also get out by .25% of the lot should you be totally wrong I mean market does smash zones as well and your loss will be .25 instead of 1 full lot. I am glad you are starting to understand what I do.

from a trader here at FF

"I've studied technical since 2003 and have yet to find anything that works. Think about this for one second. There are a whole lot of books and free technical indicators, platforms and gurus who want to sell you a service. That's where the money is.

I've even tried fundamentals and I've got to say most of the time the info you get is already baked into the cake (efficient market) most likely.

Hate to burst your bubble on Goldman UBS Morgan chase etc but I have watched there trades on the market and they SUCK just as bad as anyone else. They have traders though that haven proven themselves in times past and trade for them. They use fundamentals and technicals.

IMHO I think long term fundamentals only works. When a market is one sided and the fundamentals are there its time to pull the trigger but that's like once in a long ass while. Investing long term is the only evidence I see that works."

lot of them here at FF and in real world.I'll say if you can't make money after 5years then you are doing something deeply wrong but after 10years Trading is not for you!

Let me share something

If you play chess without studying theory of opening, mid game ,ending and play same people who have the same skill level as you you can play 10k games and still not progress.

It takes conscious effort to get better starting from theory and playing with better players.Trading is same you can spend years going in a loop doing the same things that does not work...Either you break that pattern or you continue in that disillusioned reality.

very entertaining thread

Searching for the truth

some of the posts are 😂 entire thread actually this is kind of shit people get attracted to then no wonder there is no progress after 14years that's 14 years!

why can't this idiots actually look up people here at FF that make daily pips everyday like CNtrader, Scott, likica (TMS30 actually really good trader) even our Arjun here why not. Point I am making is there are traders making money they just are not the majority...well in general 10% of anything are actually good what they do 10% of plumbers, electricians, teachers etc. 10% that do well have deduction, passion and care what they do and rest just go through emotions.

We all seen thousands of Chinese and Indian kids in business schools because their parents forced them to be there then you wonder what percentage of those would be good at it when the choice of the career was not even selected by them...

"Don't waste time with PA, s/r, s/d, fibs, levels and whatnots, that's the illusion right there." 😂

"It's not about TA, FA, PA, indicators, far from it. It's about the price where can you see an edge, can you ?" 🤔

Reason this is advance trading because this should be automatic. I mean looking at left S/R should be default in addition of this system.

Hello everyone, I'd like to introduce myself. I'm fairly new to trading, started about 3 months ago, and since then I've worked intensively to reach a minimum level of understanding. When I thought I had finally gotten a grasp of things I suffered two major blows, one with Yellen's recent speech on the interest rate hike which show that fundamentals, or in this case not even fundamentals, just rumours and insinuations, should definitely be taken into consideration when certain people are involved and the last one on last Friday's NFP where after...

Hi Ricardo Welcome!

sorry for late reply just saw your post today.Regarding your question volume analyses is pretty tricky.Its not so mach about volume spike but how large positions are.BOI can dump the yen without any warning and showing almost nothing on volume and you can have large spikes and nothing moving that's because positions are small. Since Forex is not centralized volume is at best speculative.Not going to put my hard cash on something that I don't feel is accurately reflecting the market.

My best advise don't waste your time.Look at the chart and start thinking in terms of grid..

By the way news trading requires experience and you should be AVAILABLE to close the trade not be outside on your phone and positions gets overrun.Or best set TP and SL prior regards

First time posting of chart.. AC got a doji at S38, which is also support area on H4. 0.98 is also a round number. So can consider go Long. Correct me if i overlook something else. {image} {image}

make sure you are using WP

I am going South and been going south for a while since 1.0070 have multiple positions from various levels.Can price rebound up from 98?Absolutely but my positions are targeting 9750-96 so my bias is little longer term.

What I am saying is my positions are bear but does not mean price can't bounce 50-60pips up.Its a choice I made on this particular pair. I like CAD better.

This is kind of trade that I like keeping for longer TP target. Lets just say should it hit 96 I will fulfill my monthly goal plus more on this trade alone.

you can post set up potential trades, close trade and anything that is worth sharing provided its within this threads spirit.

About spikes

Most retail trader brokers have internal computers that spike up or exaggerate the market spike to take your stops. This is so common that I don't place hard SL's anymore.

Trade small lots and monitor your trades best way in my opinion. Not every 20pip spike is worth taking a loss.

{quote} Yeah Dear Brother ,Dear Friend Davit 😊 a lot of things in right places 🙌🏆🙌🏆 finally AN got multiple rejection from S38 area and price pullback to up side and struggling to go higher , and currently watching NU for a nice short setup (between R38 and R61 area < red box >) ,price has rejected multiple times on that previous resistance area and from current pivot level price has chane to go upside. if NU pullback to that resistance level and PA create shorting oppurtunity then will enter , Take care Dear Brother Davit 😊 {image} {image}...

you got a nice stack there 🙌🏆 well done love seeing those green stacks

Just be hands off for now on shorting NU.Market is gearing up bearish on USD because Sept hike in my view won't happen specially after poor August job report. When you are shorting NU you are buying USD. I think USD will get weaker in Sept.

Just my opinion and market can prove me wrong

When you are shorting from close to WP probability of it being a successful trade is not great. PA needs to be in key zones 61-100 for better adds

Day candle green and present candle will close higher low from previous green candle indicating bull support

This is more obvious on D chart

Here is what you guys should not do.

Don't force trades! Let the trade come to you and patience is key factor. I can make my monthly goal from 2 stacks of well placed trades and have 4weeks to do so.Usually I take around 50trades a month.What I don't do is scalping or forcing trades.Think of high probability set ups ALWAYS Does the crocodile chase small fish for a meal?No that would be hard and waste energy.He waits patiently for nice chunky prey.Trading is same.

Does the cheetah attack a prey knowing its too far? no it waits, crawls as close as possible (probabilities in nature) then sprints on target when its the right time.

We are animals hunting numbers.Don't see the difference.

My aim is to make successful trading become automatic by repeated patterns and positive mental reinforcements.You need the mind to work with system.

These two are crucially related.Most don't realize how trading psychology effects results. In my opinion biggest trading mistake is having large position which contribute to greed and stress 2 things that hinder successful trading in long term.

Reason why I keep overemphasizing to trade smaller lots.Idea is to control your impulses and see the chart with relaxed and none threatening way (Mark Douglas talks a lot about this in Trading in the Zone)

When you combine positive metal imagery of yourself and trading your results will be profitable naturally.

All I can say resource on this thread exist its up to you to do the work

Hi everyone, I've been having some issues with Davit's Pivot... It seemed to work fine but now when I add additional currencies nothing happens. I've even tried to reset the indicator as well as remove all the other indicators. What I find odd is that if it's the same template shouldn't it work for all currencies? Has anyone ever had any issues like this?

I trade GJ & UJ today. Both are short trade. But GJ had given me a nerve wrecking drawdown, but luckily it is smaller lots, which is around 1% of my account. GJ is a beat and difficult pairs to trade. I will be extra cautious in handling GJ in future. Overall, I knew, GJ is going down (from yesterday), but GJ keep on spiking up, against me. Psychologically, if I trade my normal lots, for sure I have to take the beating and loose money. But with Davit's method ; i still can hold position, until the trade turns on my favor. 😊 UJ is just straight...

I don't recommend pairs that are over 120-130 ADR specially GJ the dragon. One only needs to pick 6pairs and focus on them. With ME its easy to get your pips from 1pair as Arjun demonstrated on UJ

Stay away from hyper crosses please and relax. To be calm and stress free is important. Trading will become fun activity when you learn what to avoid.

Closed NJ +196pips

carry over from last week.

Truth of the matter this pair overrun extreme levels above R138 so I was able to turn a loss into profit by selling from higher up.

Sometimes it works and other times best to get out. Reason I stayed because like I said this pair was way overbought. It still is OB but NZD is super strong now so got out.

Just sharing my trading thought process. Benefit of trading small lots allows recovery.

Hi Davit,

Im looking at EU, to test the support level before continuing upward. Pull back around 50 pips.

I may be wrong about this.

USD is oversold

We just had a weak manufacturing during summer on top of floods in massive scale. Would it continue decline? I doubt it.

To answer your question I rather sell EU then buy. Euro fundies are in shits. So I am looking to short as soon as I see weakness

Hi Davit and guys! Nice thread, i have read all posts for last 3 days 😊 Have some experience with TMS, but fibo pivots looks more simple to choose direction. EU short - R61, strong SR, BEOB H1, TDI div, shark pattern. TP around W pivot (image)

Hi Makron

Welcome. The reason I don't post harmonic charts because PA is king and price can shutter levels as we have seen on AN and NU. It's always healthy to keep in mind that Pivots, harmonics are only reference points. I like to focus on pivots because to me that has a solid Edge.

TMS has become anything but simple. Actually it should be called Emmanuel system since he basically rides the thread. Not saying it's bad or good but it's not exactly how big E envisioned.

Good luck

my AN open trade hit @ sl 1.02700 ,loss was small (on long term view AN has chance to go upside ,but my maximum trade was on that for that reason was unable to add new entry) its a part of business , 😊 now watching price behaviour on other pairs and PA and waiting for a good opportunity 😞🕒 {image}

Just an observation. Please watch PA and ignore the noise here at FF. There are a lot of "traders" making extreme predictions and that can influence your decisions including reading shit articles.

There were group of traders here predicting GU going as low as 1.20 same guys predicting EU at parity.Can't take this clowns seriously.Focus on the charts and don't even bother reading other threads.Less you read the better.

Just about every swing ends with a spike.AN NC I think may have reached their tops.NC reached multi year high my chart just does not go further then 2004 and present high exceeded over 15 years could be more.So keep those things in mind

[quote] Regarding NC, it is attacking 20 years high now. My Oanda also goes back only till 2004, but FxPro has a history since 1995. There was a peak about 150 pips higher back in 1996,1997. Still holding my shorts and waiting for the big move. However need to reconsider the exit. Waiting months will actually cost me quite some money on overnight fees. Or the issue might be solved much sooner, my SL is less than 200 pips away... edit:replaced attachment. {image}

Hold the NC.I know I am.This has 400pips south potential and it is running out of steam.Fundamentals are very different then in 90's and NZD just does not have what it takes to continue appreciating.Actually guys who have no DD on AN longs 0300 or NC shorts 96 have fantastic positions.Like Ideal.If you have no DD on AN load it up its opertunity not often presented.

AN has beautiful butterfly very strong pattern on daily

I find this version real good.Shows lot of patterns but most important are gartleys

As many have already realized the benefit of small lots.It allows controlled DD and expansion of trades for Recovery and profits

Example you went long on AN at 450 at 20% position price went 400 you loaded another 20% and price dropped 300 you could load dble the position 40% and you are still 80% of intended lot and once you enter rest of 20% 100% lot invested then leave it alone.Let the trade space to do its thing

They are two ways to trade. Sniper scalping method think of spear fishing.In and out but that requires hours and hours of screen time in front of pc and most guys have a real job and that's not efficient.

My way is to cast a net on wide area to catch fish in abundance but requires at times to wait .So small lots are your net and allows wider price capture and control losses and DD Makes sense?

about SL once again I set $$ not pips

For example lets say your intended $ to be invested on AN is 500

You break up your lot to 4-5 mini lots and enter at key zones 61-100 ideal then as long as your 500 has not been reached you are good. That could be 300 pips when traditional trader is out at 30-50 pips sl you are still there without worry.

This is crucial difference between what I do and almost everyone else. 20-50 SL is most often hit because your broker and market makers what your money. MM push price beyond key S/R and your broker triggers the spike internally exaggerating market spike by good 10-20 pips. Have you watched News? I had 3 different brokers and had 3 different size spikes on same trade. So generally hard stops will suck you dry over long haul. That's what I do on SL and you can do as you feel comfortable. It's extremely important you do what you think is right for you.

As you probably seen my equity graph I have taken many losses so I have no issues what's so ever taking losses and when I do I accept it as part of trading and move on.

regards

Hi TC welcome

Its a good probability set up. Entire NZD pairs are at the extremes for that matter its looking good.

Just an idea 78S is rather short TP.Should this move you can target WP.As always PA is king.If you see its stalling and turning back get out.

One of the concept of this thread is dismissing lot of baggage lot of traders were using unsuccessfully

Moving averages.trend lines,typical formations like flags etc.What we do focus on pivots and price action.You will get better as trader.Look at Arjun he is like machine gun nailing those trades one after another and never heard him talk about MA's,TL, etc. Stick to system and execute

Hope some of you cashed in on this. This was great day

Generally I am impressed by some of guys. Really inspiring me and best part you didn't have to pay me 500 dollar system with video 🙄🎵 Totally free. All I ask you put your heart and dedication like Arjun ,mmhasan,Mch1970,Fibo38,Pipssniper007 and many others and pips will pile up.

I wished someone really showed me right way when I started wasted lot of money....and time and eventually found my way and that's what I am sharing. Should cut your learning curve way shorter then if you were trying system after system going through typical trading jargons that look impressive on the chart but useless in real world. keep going!

Don't usually trade UC on the long side, however felt this was a good opportunity, especially given price moved away from pivot so quickly in the first part of the week. Exited this morning for +400 pips. Have left a small residual position, as have CAD employment data this afternoon. Have set profit target in the gap between current high of week and the weekly pivot - so will see how this trade unfolds later today. {image}

Hi DAVIT! and ALL Wowwwwww..... What a techniques and Method..... Davit you are giving away CRAZY EAZY cash to anyone has little brain and patience and trust.....!! I can see ARJUN and mch1970 are mainly building BANKS.....!! Initially I read this tread few days ago but I have paid enough attention.... so did not catch the SO SIMPLE and CLEAR Strategy you proposed.... may be I was not in full mind to grab the rules.... Today, I reread again your first few posts and grab the main part and then entered EU short @R78 and UCHF long... @R61 so far so...

welcome!

Easy part is relative to experience,I had guys earlier on my thread Chiko catalin _eros toksy lukyman guitar cchersia(specially this guy) and many others either could not make pips or not ready to trade for real no longer post and frankly I careless only 10% in anything tries hard.

lets see how long you will last

To be honest this works for people Like Arjun,Mch1970,Mraam Fibo38 pipsniper007 mmhasan and more because they are ready for this material.

And I understand vast majority here will chase another system within a month. That's ok with me because I am looking for that creme on top

Just sharing trading insight

Most systems are based on trends and often these systems fail badly when PA goes into a range and that happens like 70% of times.

So I decided years ago that if price ranges more often then trends then why not milk that price when in range

Just look at the board you will see ranging pairs like NJ stuck between R38 and WP ...Best not buy /sell both directions but go towards direction that break out may occur in case that happens you are already in great positions to stay longer.

Range happens on higher TF as well

Look at EU stuck in this range since Jan 2015

{quote} how do you use "Angular reading/position" better to see high TFs TDI arrow but this might lead to lose some pips as we got to wait bit longer to see it, so M30 TF is OK and "ADR reading/numbers" before entry? Since we focus on Key level, if the ADR reach maximum close to 100% when it come to 78, 100 levels this could be positive signal to entry if TDI cross with a good angle 🤔

I think its lot more simpler

ADR maxing out and price reaching 61-100 R/S has high probability outcome trades.Its just probability and that's what I am trading stacking as many odds in my favor as possible

Anglator arrows is quick way to see higher TF price action.To give you quick glance what PA is doing without keep clicking and changing charts.Its only a reference not a trading signal by itself.

TDI same cross is only reference to confirm PA

Number 1 trading signal is PA+key pivots 61-100 RS rest are supporting roles

Another target achieved for +200 pips. Even though CAD employment increased, the Unemployment rate ticked up 0.1% to 7% causing a spike in UC.

Had positioned for a move towards the weekly pivot and was duly reached. Loving this method.

Done for the week now and account growth of +22% this month already. I would echo Davit's comments that it only takes a few well executed trades, with positions built in small increments to allow a monthly target of 10% to be achieved.

no offense but please clean your chart.I can't make you a better trader if you hang on to your past habits.

regards

UC hit WP either will continue up next week to 38R and 61R or turn around heading south.Much depends how market perceives USD and Oil crude prices.

If I have to guess this bull move is not finished yet and could test both pivots I mentioned.

My criticism is why were you selling and not buying? clearly PA went bullish after the news and PA was USD bullish since yesterday.

Naturally you want to trade with the sentiment unless PA is clearly hitting key pivots 61-100.

Anyway trade and learn from your mistakes.Mistakes are tools for us to get better if we actually analyze it objectively.

good catch agree its nice set up.Joining you your pivots are off too much

try this

Set brokers candle to FALSE. This was the trick/key to being able adjust the pivots up and down for me.

Set the week to latest week on Choose H1 start candle/finish candle as follows:

'Choose H1 start candle': 2016 06 19 05:00

'Choose H1 finish candle': 2016 06 24 05:00

(5.00 a.m. may not work on your chart so try different hours till pivots line up).

Fiddle with the hour on your 'Choose H1 start candle/finish' settings to get it to line up with Davits U/C chart pivots. 5 a.m. was the hour that worked on my chart. When you find the corresponding hour, set the start candle and finish candle to the exact same hour.

Update: Monday, January 1, 2018

I am continuously get amazed about this pivot indi.The accuracy is almost magic And we have guys here at FF keep arguing about Fibonacci numbers influence....really these guys have no experience.I watch these pivots every day and still get awestruck Clearly pivots are there beginning of the week and don't change so we don't have the "repainting" or lines appearing after the price gets there.No its there before even price gets there.

That's what's so great.

Look GU exact bounce on WP then look at 61S exact SR 3 bounces then price shoots up and if you think these pivots are just random you are clearly wrong. All I know and Arjun and Mch1970 know that we are making money! That's what counts!

Thanks for your work. Really appreciated. I think Mch1970 also uses same or similar indi with history pivots showing.

I did consider this before and did not apply in my trading because to me clarity is most important. Every week is NEW week with new pivots and new way to tackle price. To me knowing frankly where pivots were last week or entire month before is just cluttering your brain with extra data that may influence your trading now in the present in negative way..

Each his own I will stick with the way I trade which has been extraordinarily profitable and why fix something if its not broken. That goes for TDI alerts etc.

Some of the comments here on my system and trading in general is mind bending. This is the result of not having been trading enough. The reason I am firm how I like this thread to be because I have been both Art teacher and Chess teacher and know where people are in their development. This is not trading 101 this is advance trading! When a person does not know to take a loss when clearly wrong I cant help. To guys who are new to this my best advise is ask less and take more. Be silent in a good way observe Price Action. Observe charts posted here by Me Arjun Mch1970 Pipssniper etc and learn what they do. Don't just fire questions relax allow your brain to assimilate new way of trading and allow space for you to understand. Did you download the PDF's on harmonics and trading psychology? Did you watch any videos on PA? did you practice some trades and wrote down your mistakes and analyze? You need to commit and do work. I usually can detect who does and who just fires questions. Wanted to share my experience of using your system Davit on DAX30. I trade on H4 and was tempted to close once it hit the the pivot and S38. Yet as it can be noticed the separation in the TDI is quite substantial (shown by the arrow) that I decided to keep it going, expecting a gap down on Monday. PA confirmed it with 3 crows on both H1 and H4. Pity there is not a MTF version of this indi as it would help a lot to watch across multiple time frames. Thanks again for this thread. {image} good start and welcome. Pivots don't change with MTF so I don't understand your comment. If you want to clutter your screen with 5 different mini screens you can do so but I fail to see the logic to it. I rather see clear chart and I can click on 15min and 1hour in seconds switching in between. Negative side of having so many screens open it takes lot of PC power and you might experience freezing of your MT4 when you least want it like before the news.

{quote} My apologies Davit, I was referring to the TDI indi not the pivot one. IF at the bottom we have a layout of the TDI on say from M15 up to D1 we would be knowing when all time frames have been synchronized. If for example we take EA on these mentioned time frames we would have noticed the attached at the selected point marked with the red vertical line. {image}

Hi

I think you must understand that TDI is just support roll in fact I can trade without it as well with no loss of confidence. Your thinking is assuming TDI taking a primal roll of decision making process hence I can see why you like the idea of MTF TDI.

You got 6 posts at FF and without any trading track record on my system you are already consumed by desire to "improve" my system.

Let me be blank its not the system needs improving its the trader trading the system. You can add alerts, MTF on TDI Pivot history etc and still fail making money.

What I am teaching here is pure trading with price action at key pivots. What you do with it its your business but if you gonna post trades here please post with my template and indicators as is.

Thank you

{quote} Yep divergence, that was a signal to close my shorts here. {quote} Maybe too soon, but I'm also in this short.

Just so we are in correct mindset. Dirs should not be looked at as signal. They could add more probability odds in your favor when combining with the systems methodology but its something I am not giving great importance. You can have Div and price still pushing up or down in hundreds of pips irregardless of it.

Friday and last night Euro crosses were killed and now Euro is left alone and crosses are bought. You can see how MM's hummers pairs.

In broader scheme of things Euro fundamentals are in shits and Dragi can't do much to stimulate inflation.

Won't be surprised Euro crashing soon.

Glad that I've stumbled upon this great thread, it's the most simple complicated method of trading I've seen and its brilliant teacher. Was a little bit early on my GU longs this morning so got stopped out. Entered again and making nice pips. All trades in green. {image} nice going EG is one of favorite pairs 👍 I like that its not hyper and you can build positions without worrying too much it running away.

Its funny that my head thinks exact opposite of what lot of traders do looking for more volatility pairs and I make more money from less volatile pairs. Go figure

Running with this method outside of my comfort zone... {image}

One way to feel more comfortable is reducing your lot size and entering on differing price points averaging out your entries.Instead of 1 lot you could trade .25x4 at different levels.

This is important because we are dealing with moving target price can reverse at 61R but could push to 78R and 100R had you placed your full lot at 61 then chances are you would have taken the loss when PA went to 78 however by averaging it out you turn the adds in your favor

There is another advantage as well. Should PA change after you entered .25 and you decided its not working out then you could get out with .25 loss instead of 1 full lot.Its great way to reduce losses as well.

Ok sharing one of my blunders

I shorted EA friday 4850+ and Monday there were all underwater. Kept them floating waiting opportunity to BE and just get out with minimum damage.

I am happy that I actually made +22pips

Not saying don't take a loss but recovery process is important as well hence why I always insist on small lots. Anyway could of turn out badly but worked out. It happens in trading not your every trade is accurate.

Afternoon Arjun from the other side of the world,

Did you choose to go long because of the resistance from the left that flipped and became support. Also the last 4 or 5 small candles were making HLs. What else were you taking into consideration at the S38 level?

Thanks,

Yes, I do this with other pairs and it eases the burden. Reducing my reliance on TL's/support resistance confluence is my challenge. I thought I had an Aussie short nailed last week based on market "architecture". I then cut my loss when it looked like it may keep going higher due to not following my observed structure, only to watch it take a major dump on Friday 🙄 such is life...

Draghi speaking tomorrow so sparks may fly. Latest data is very disappointing on Euro inflation hence I think Draghi may not object further weakening of Euro

As a side note Feds Governor Lael Brainard was quick suppressing excitement of rate hike on scope of wall street significant drops.

Hide and seek game going but one thing is certain Dems won't raise on elections ahead. Nobody wants wall street crash when Democrats want desperately Hillary to win in light of the fact she characterized half of Trump supporters as "deplorables"

This is becoming like a circus

{quote} Right, yep looks very good. I like the stuttered 1hr PA coming down to the current 38R then the longer candle breakthrough, classic support turned resistance indicator. Retest looks good to short. EC still going well. Have got into GC also this morning {image} {image} {image}

Looks good. I do recommend using my template from this thread page 1. I no longer use any MA's. In essence this thread is pure Price action with pivots as guides and TDI as supporting roll. I think that's enough tools. If you feel more comfortable with my old template that's fine I have no objections.

UC was looking great short earlier today but frankly I bought way too much Cad crosses and didn't want more of it.

EU should be close to 1235 most online sites are same and I know how price is stuck there pivot location is true.

If you are off too much you can play with this settings

Set brokers candle to FALSE. This was the trick/key to being able adjust the pivots up and down for me.

Set the week to latest week on Choose H1 start candle/finish candle as follows:

'Choose H1 start candle': 2016 06 19 05:00

'Choose H1 finish candle': 2016 06 24 05:00

(5.00 a.m. may not work on your chart so try different hours till pivots line up).

Fiddle with the hour on your 'Choose H1 start candle/finish' settings to get it to line up with Davits EU chart pivots. 5 a.m. was the hour that worked on my chart. When you find the corresponding hour, set the start candle and finish candle to the exact same hour.

wow your pivot is exact now 🍷

PA may continue bearish until closer to rate decision time. 100S 3109 is possible target for MM's

One can average in incrementally from this point on since there is strong resistance now at 3180.

{quote} 🍷 You rule your thread with an iron fist. I've not seen that on any other thread here on FF. lol Trading is speculating on the future change in price of a security. Up/down, Buy/Sell, Long/Short - It is a game of probabilities. Trading is using selected tools and information to hopefully give you an edge that enables you to profit from your speculation. Trading is about protecting your capital when you are wrong, which you inevitably will be at times, and trying to maximise profit when you are right. That's my take. By the way I like...

Hi Wiz welcome

Bravo you nailed it. To me trading is about probabilities that you have control over to stack the odds in your favor. What I share here perhaps best system at FF in terms of winning probability.

It's unfortunate that I have no filter to screen out the idiots. My perimeters are limited. The simpleton actually thought that I owe to everyone an answer for every idiotic question. No it's on my 1st page. This is advance trading

I am doing these guys service by removing them from here because they will lose money. It takes experience to understand this thread despite the fact it appears simple.

portunity to reload shorts on EG triple top and strong R61
EC and EA are in great spots

Price action on lot of pairs are pretty erratic.I had +150pips gain on UC turn -10 in 5min.Just need to wait
I think within this month after rate decision which I think will be same UC may drop back to 29 so that's 300 pips south.That would easily get your 10% plus more for sept.

When you are in great spot like UC now hold accept some DD that's part of trading.Don't panic stay calm,relax

I have UC shorts in minor DD and its fine.I can easily hold this and should price jump to 3280 which is unlikely but should it get there my positions will be there and I most likely will add higher up and wait.Sometimes you must think like an investor you are buying great price at discount and only requirement is to wait.

{quote} Great! one quick question tho...i know i read this in the thread about your when you take profit..but if i can ask you again...do you take profit on pure price action against you at s/r or do you follow your trades placing your stops behind s/r or u just go for a target or do you just have another way..sorry if im being redundant...it just i can get into great positions thats simple..but i have a hard time cashing out...sometimes holding for more and end up getting a small percent of what i had..not cool

I follow market situation. Some pairs are in range NC AC for example and some have higher probability making over 100pips distance. You must identify the nature of the pair you are trading. Trending or ranging. Once that is out of the way you should take 50-100pips targets. I sometimes go longer or shorter depending on PA

So there is no generic formula. Every pair sort of has a personality and moves unique way. Beauty of my system is that it eliminates guesswork irregardless of the pairs.

[quote] Thanks mch1970. Davit, I have not managed to read the whole thread yet but I am working my through from the beginning, trying to pick out little nuggets along the way. For example I have used the Daily Open Line and ADR Values before in my trading, but today I have read how you apply them and suddenly they seem mch more practical and valuable. Now they will be on my charts and not just as meaningless clutter. I will keep reading 🍷

I like your attitude Wizlon. You keep that up and you will grow as a trader.

I am a huge fan of Mark Douglas whom I credited to hammer the idea of Edge and probability in my trading and which inspired me to put this system together.

Please watch this genius. Beautifully explains lot of things that most traders don't even think about.

<https://youtu.be/LA1hEZPh8rU>

You could actually if you want comment what parts you thought was great. In all honesty this thread alone without slightness pompousness if you follow carefully and execute properly will cut your learning curve in half. Instead of you struggling 10yrs and not making money this will get you making money less time then you think.

Biggest dilemma lot of new traders face is not understanding nature of probability.

They chase system after system and after few losses move on to another system and this goes on for average 3-5yrs until something hits you in the head.

What is critical to understand that just about every average system is profitable provided you give enough sample size with defined edge until probability plays out.

That could mean 100 trades. Most gave up after 10. In fact there are guys here on this thread made good money then dissipated. I just know they are blindly looking for another holly grail.

My advise is you will not know if this is profitable unless you have large sample size(have over 1k trades. That's the honest truth. So commit or move on to another system but no matter what you do until you have a trading plan, parameters defined no system will work in the long term..

Video above at 18min Mark talks about this the sample size. This is very important. Series of trades to allow the Edge to play out.

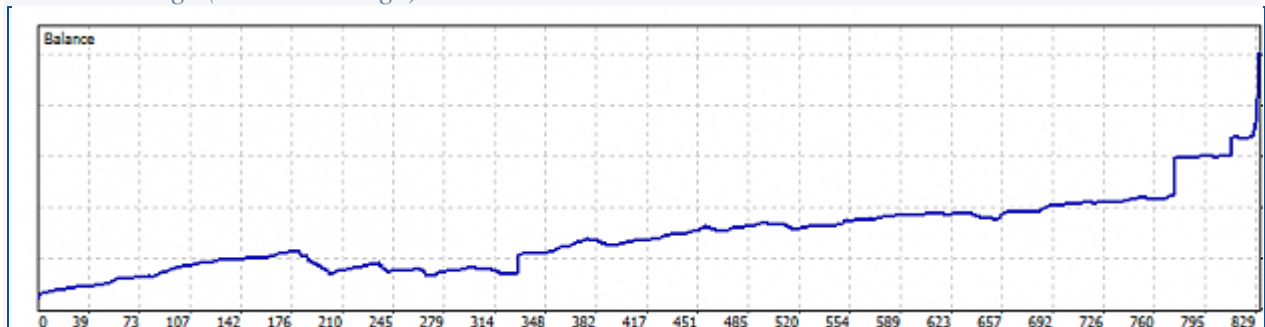

below my equity since Jan 2016

This is my large sample size

Total Trades:393 Short Positions (won %):370 (81.35%) Long Positions (won %):23 (39.13%)

Profit Trades (% of total):310 (78.88%) Loss trades (% of total):83 (21.12%)

{quote} It's inspiring. 👍

Thanks for appreciating. Material Mark Douglas covers is simply gold. Interesting thing is when one is exposed to a material at the right time in his/her trading development it resonates deeply as it did to me but for others they might glance over and move on.

This is why lot of trading is subjective because each trader basically trades themselves, their experience, set of skills etc. I try to introduce things that made a difference in my trading but as always I accept that only small minority will appreciate simply based on their experience.

As you guys aware I am an Artist and love going to museums. I love looking at great art and I usually go into it deeply when I have friend who appreciates art and can observe what is being looked at. That makes the difference how deeply I get into it. I took my brother to art museum and he almost fell asleep so I knew I could not even cover the basics... It's no different trading is same. Everyone sees the market from totally different perspective based on their experience, attitude, skill, psychological aspects. Sorry that it's little long post but I needed to cover this why I insist to work with people who already have some experience and have the right attitude.

UC turn around. Notice that price past R78 but not R100

Key area 61-100 on every pair gold silver whatever.Does not matter.It works on all markets.

Thus is what I am talking about probability EDGE

You take 50 trades between 61-100 provided PA stalls and turns (Price Action)

I am almost certain you will have 70% winners.Now how can you increase you winning % by reducing lot size and spreading the trades to cover the "zone"

To me this is very simple all requires is patience.Wait for trades to come zone watch then react.Repeat this in large sample size then you'll see your account studly grow without stress or worry.That's because success is not measured by single trade but series of trades.

Another trader that I like is Richard Donchian the father of trend following and break out. What he did basically draw a channel and take every break out and some were false and some successful. He made millions at age of 67 and started trading late in his life but was a market analysts for years prior of him trading the markets.

Point I am trying to make here is that probability EDGE he saw in his system was executed ruthlessly until his edge paid.

Inserted Video

Worth hearing from Mark Douglas master of probabilities and trading psychology please watch you will take something from it.

at 20min mark it gets very interesting when he talks about psychology behind losing.

I have a smaller sample size than Davit, as been focusing solely on this method since 1st July - but the same kind of metrics apply. I look for set-ups in the 61-100 range, apply manageable position sizing in small batches. My losses have come from simply not been patient - so taking trades in the 38-61 range i.e. the probability isn't giving me an edge in this zone. Having deployed small trade sizes, I have usually added...

I don't know your account size

you must determine what % you want to risk on each trade

Industry average is about 2-3% per trade, Does not matter how you break up the lots what's important you stay close to your determined risk %

I risk more because I have more experience. You need to decide that yourself

Hello Davit, Thanks so much for this highly insightful thread! Been watching and learning on the sidelines. We chatted before by PM regarding my mismatch in chart levels which I've never been able to resolve, however I noticed that they were the same as Arjun-LE1 and he was picking trades off well so I've just gone with it. Regarding UC it looks like we may have reached or are nearing a top however the wildcard that plays heavily on the CAD is oil which has been on a downward spiral. Looks as though it may have reached a support level - lets see....

You welcome.I must run away to my part timer job now short on time.Quick answer is we don't know the future and its pure probability.I take trades based on my edge and if works fine if not fine repeat over and over until your edge shows profit.I can not make it simpler.Read Mark Douglas Trading in the Zone.You will understand

CADCHF I place trade on HTF. But always look for S100 - R100 levels. With pivot points, I can see easily which currency is oversold or overbought. CADJPY is also today's candidate but again let's wait for stock markets to stabilize. Overall, I am satisfied w/ this strategy. Awesome work Davit. {image}

Good job friend.

Was at work and my GU trades got hammered. Good thing I never enter all my lots at once. Will hold this since I believe Feds won't raise in election months coming up and economy is not so great. Holding rates will push all majors into overdrive corrections. GU 35-36? Yes its probable after Feds.

EDIT I was totally caught off guard why Pound dropped hard and now I found more info Brexit negotiations...missed this.

USD has tremendous influence on Crude. USD gets strong oil gets weak and opposite true. After Feds Crude will go up and UC AU in particular will appreciate.

NZD is over appreciated. AN needs 400pips north next 4weeks. Will not buy NZD but I like your thinking.

This is life drawing class equivalent in trading. Not beginner drawing class when you draw shapes like square and circles.

When you come in life drawing and can't even draw a basic figure you are lost and obviously you jumped a step.I suggest going back to drawing 101

If I stop and explain the basics of drawing then entire class is held back! That's not right for majority of advanced students who are ready to progress further up not held back...by a person who can't read basic instructions from page 1

There are much beautiful examples of life drawing class with life models but its public forum...

Dear Davit and All why my pivot 3.1 line is not the same as yours. Please advise. {image} your broker time is different.

try playing with settings

Set brokers candle to FALSE. This was the trick/key to being able adjust the pivots up and down for me.

Set the week to latest week on Choose H1 start candle/finish candle as follows:

'Choose H1 start candle': 2016 06 19 05:00

'Choose H1 finish candle': 2016 06 24 05:00

(5.00 a.m. may not work on your chart so try different hours till pivots line up).

Fiddle with the hour on your 'Choose H1 start candle/finish' settings to get it to line up with Davits U/C chart pivots. 5 a.m. was the hour that worked on my chart. When you find the corresponding hour, set the start candle and finish candle to the exact same hour.

Please clean your chart from Christmas decorations.No MA's and no Arrows on main chart.If you can't run with healthy legs you are not going to with crutches .

Please read the disclaimer from page 1

Notice M30 H1 H4 still Bear

Market is still in its infancy in terms of liquidity.We still have LO and NY to kick in.

PA may continue down or it could rebound back to 32 but I am holding all my positions and willing to find out.Should it drop further my rewards will be tremendous so far I have no real reason to close the trades.

Closed EC +210pips

Looking for a bounce to build stronger positions

This was obvious trade which I alerted. Price tested R61 3 times and could not break

This is what I call a very high probability A+ trade

GU longs are still open. 65% DD 35% in profit. I may hold this to 33-34

In my opinion market makers are building longs on GU now. Sure there are some bear pressure but that will change and after Weds this should sky rocket up quick.

Quoting vory

I'm happy to see you doing well guys as I messed up completely. I was in both USDCAD, EURCAD for about one week. USDCAD started too early, was over -1200 pips at one point, but I did not panic and stick to the plan. EURCAD was just a little minus. Today afternoon I just quick checked. Both positions about +1500 and +1500 pips. But did not have time to monitor any further.

Closed now as "break even" -200 +200. This greed... I really saw my trade of the year is here. 😞 (I guess it will drop like a brick now as I am out.) Will stay out this week unless...

Hi Voty

If you stick with 61-100R/S you will have high probability trades. Mistakes happen learn from it and move on. There is a difference of mistake getting in too early and taking system trades with probabilities on your side. With correct entries with enough sample size you can grow your account 10% or more a month.

Part of trading is waiting right time to strike. No different then big cats stalking and sprinting at right time. Too early you missed the target and waste energy. Trading is hunting in pure sense of the word.

What I share here is winning system that you can build thousands and thousands of dollars without stress or worry. Key is practicing discipline to stay within parameters of this trading system. One reason I discourage new traders trading this because they have no discipline and are trigger happy. It takes time to rain in the urges.

Regards

its baffling to me why you are selling in such weak location plus market is waiting for Feds and sentiment is Feds will hold the rates which should push AU up not down... PA has been slightly bullish since open. Bottom yellow box. This still could work so don't let me scare you but I am trying to understand your thought process.... based on everything I have been sharing here this trade is below average quality in terms of probability success.

Davit, you are absolutely correct. I will continue to study charts on your thread and read. My rationale for taking the trade: viewed it as a pullback when I saw the PB almost touching the R61. Believed the position would go south to at least the WP, which would have been the first level of support. Thanks for being honest with me, TX

To be totally honest nobody knows the future including me. I just like to think in probabilities and ask simple question.

Should you take similar trades like 20 how many of them would be winners. Remember there is no edge in your trade. I would say most likely you will end up losing money.

However if you flip this around and take 20 trades between 61-100R/S you most likely will have 70% winners. That's the Edge.

I like your attitude. Be open and grow.

{image} Not sure anyone caught this one. Wow just shot up without any indication what so ever. That's Forex though.

That's market makers squeezing weak longs on NZD then dumping. Squeeze is part of taking your money...and that's why most trends swings ends with spikes.

Pivots specially 61-100 provide the road map where that might occur.

Hundreds of examples but just look at NC 100R to T

This is the closest you gonna get to holly grail 🤔🎵 but you need other criteria to succeed-patience, discipline, skills to read PA and understanding what probability is which I covered many times here.

Just an update from last week. Certainly tested the patience and showed the importance of exercising the rules around the 61-100 zone.

Closed EC shorts for +1500 pips across 20 positions. In this case, I reduced trade size on each entry to allow room for further positions between R78 and R100.

Attached Image (click to enlarge)

Davit's Fundamental Posts since beginning Pivot Trading Update: Monday, January 1, 2018

Closed EA shorts for +1000 pips across 17 positions.

Attached Image \(click to enlarge\)

Again not a perfect trade by any means. Slightly late entry on the first batch of trades, which ended up between R38 and R61. There was a nice run down of 100 pips on these trades and should have exited with a view to reloading shorts at a higher level.

However a reversal then followed and subsequently added positions at R61 and R78. Exited this first batch for 400 pips on Friday afternoon. The final batch simply followed price action down towards the weekly pivot which added a further 600 pips, so a very nice result in the end.

Closed UC shorts for +800 pips across 12 positions.

Attached Image \(click to enlarge\)

Davit's Fundamental Posts since beginning Pivot Trading

Update: Monday, January 1, 2018

Again UC became very stretched at the tail end of last week and all entries in this batch were between R100 and R138. UC clearly holding out for the unlikely possibility of a rate rise being announced this week, so exited these trades on Monday.

{quote} Cool !! i will have a look 😊 but i prefer the pivots ... wasted too much cash and mistakes jumping from one strategy to the next 😞

In the end its not about the system but understanding how simple EDGE using right lot size can generate profits over series of trades.

This concept is the most honest professional way to trade. Its not easy to grasp.

Average trader wins dies on single trade whereas pros trade over sample size. This is the key. I don't get rattles on 1 2 3 15 losses because I know given 100 trades I'll hit 70 winners.

Please watch Mark Douglas series on trading. He will open you up to next higher level since I think you already have experience but need fine tuning

Watch all 4 please and get back what you took out of it. This is what I mean work. Effort dedication to improve. Not much different then strength training. You can easily bench press 60lbs with 2 hands and you can do this over and over and get no improvement. You are not gonna improve because your weight is not CHALLENGING your muscles. Your mind trading mind is same way it needs to grow and maintain that level and fine tune it. Why do same things that didn't work before... Well everyone has a free will to change. The ones that need the change most succeed because their desire is great.

You dont need to know whats going to happen next to make money. Anything can happen. Every moment is unique, meaning every edge and outcome is truly a unique experience. The trade either works or it doesnt. Mark Douglas

All I did is comply my system's edge.Could of been a loser or a winner but I don't know the future all I know I have the edge of probability on my side at certain zones.

Rest of trading is inquiring mental discipline - patience for good signal.Patience to see the results(letting winners run) getting out when wrong and repeat the process without emotional baggage.If you struggle on any of this you need to work on yourself.

Davit, I was wondering if you've ever used standard pivots instead of Fib pivots? And if so, what made you decide to stick with fibs? Do you find that they are more accurate?

Standard pivot Point (P) = (High + Low + Close)/3 Support 1 (S1) = (P x 2) - High
Support 2 (S2) = P - (High - Low) Resistance 1 (R1) = (P x 2) - Low Resistance 2 (R2) =
P + (High - Low)

Fibonacci Pivot Point (P) = (High + Low + Close)/3 Support 1 (S1) = P - { .382 * (High - Low) }
Support 2 (S2) = P - { .618 * (High - Low) } Support 3 (S3) = P - { 1 * (High - Low) }
Resistance 1 (R1) = P + { .382 * (High - Low) } Resistance 2 (R2) = P + { .618 * (High - Low) }
Resistance 3 (R3) = P + { 1 * (High - Low) }

As you can tell they are same from base but projections are different. I believe in Fibs and harmonics and traded enough and made enough $$ to stick with fibs.

To me fib pivots are simply dynamic reflecting traders emotions. We basically trade emotion of the crowd and that changes at key zones.

you need convincing? look and I have hundreds of examples

By the way emotional part is based on Elliot Wave theory which harmonics are based and all based on fib ratios. As long as humans are at the other side of the trade more than algos then I have an edge because I know their emotional exhaustion levels.

My first post! Hello all, Question for Davit, what is a pivot? (ONLY JOKING 😊) In 2011 I seen an advert to make money in trading. I followed it through and signed up and paid 6k to have a 1-1 mentor for 5 days. It was a joke, the guy was nothing more than a salesman. I then looked for another mentor, only 3k this time and this lady new her stuff. It was just that she was a terrible teacher and quite eccentric. I was encouraged to trade live from the start which I did. Over the next 12 months I became prolific. That is prolific at losing money....

Hi Shaun

Welcome 😊 Your efforts in trying to understand this thread is exemplary specially that you took the time to learn the material. Mark Douglas truly opened my eyes but I was ready for him. People have hard time understanding the concept of profitable trading over series of trades. Mark D makes taking a loss painless and that's important because we don't die and win over single trade. I deliberately trade with smaller lots so there is less pain taking a loss but my method has tremendous opportunity to recover as well. This is the key gradual attack and gradual pull back.

Wish you the best

Thank you Davit for a very interesting thread. A number of people seem to use it very successfully.

I recently discovered this thread and downloaded the indicators and template and set up charts to match Davits. However like many others here, I am using an Australian broker (Pepperstone) with so called GMT+2 or New York Close timing. I know Davit said that he uses Oanda and it seems that he has a GMT-5 account and uses the brokers weekly candle for pivot calculations. The parameters of the pivot indicator were intended to overcome the broker timing differences and allow matching pivots from any broker, with of course minor differences for the pivot levels due to price bar differences.

Like many other here I could not manage to get my pivots to match Davits. I read the posts on how other people set their pivots but did not manage to get any logical or correct results.

I then examined the MQ4 code and found that the indicator will never yield pivots from a differently timed broker to match Oanda due to a bug in the indicator program code. If they do happen to match it is mere coincidence and not a repeatable result. I then corrected the code for personal use and am satisfied that it now works as intended but I was hesitant to post the corrections on this thread. However, after seeing yet another example of incorrect pivots and questions as to why the pivot levels are different, I decided to share. At least then all participants should have matching pivots as the pivot levels are a fairly important part of the success of the strategy!

The updated MQ4 file (updated to show the Version parameter as 3) is attached. I did not change the file name of the indicator on purpose as that would require the template to be updated as well.

I would also like to use this opportunity to clarify the use and meaning of the indicator input parameters (only those concerning the pivot values) as these do not seem to be documented and this also adds to the confusion of incorrect results.

Broker's Candle If this is set to True then the Open, High, Low and Close of the brokers candle for the selected (previous) period (D, W or M) is used to calculate the pivots for the current period and the next three parameters are totally ignored and have no meaning. If set to False then the next three parameters are used to define and highlight the (previous) pivot period.

Choose H1 Start Candle This is the starting date and time for the selected period (ie First Bar of the pivot period). Let us for this post assume a weekly pivot. In the case of a New York Close broker (ie such as Pepperstone) it should be set to the previous week Monday at 7:00. This can be verified but also makes sense that from GMT-5 to GMT+2 = 7 hours. This date does not roll over automatically and must be set every week.

Choose H1 Finish Candle This is the finish or end or closing or last candle of the period. It should be set for a New York Close broker to this week Monday at 6:00. This and the previous parameter then defines the week start and end from which the pivot values are calculated. Stating the obvious, this must also be adjusted every week. This also means that the rollover from one week to the next occurs at the start of Monday (00:00) according to Oanda time although the market opens earlier.

Display Start and End lines for manual settings Setting this to True will draw two vertical lines at the start and end of the pivot period which is useful while verifying the setup but can be set to False once you are happy that your pivots are set up correctly.

I attach a recent screenshot from Davit and one from my version to show the matching pivot levels. Differences in levels are due to price differences between brokers and should not exceed 3 to 5 pips maximum. If you have differences more than that, you may have the period start and end times set incorrectly.

Trade well!!

Nico

its done my army is in combat ready mode waiting for action often huge spikes occur on major news events and I like to place limit orders because it happens very fast and by the time you click price may get filled 20-50pips lower then desired number. Some brokers freeze for purpose as well or increase the spread by 4x so live trading becomes real challenging during the event

Its a technique I use on news days

{quote} yes was just looking at that davit...has divergence looks like its about done here...wave 5 of 5 can see it on the ao....waiting for PA to confirm....with the pivots do you ever consider trend..what i mean is do you ever look at support zones turned to resistance zones when trending down to short more and vice versa..thanks in advance for your answer

Hi G welcome

Yes I do look at pivots and main structures and do reload trying to catch the trend in multiple swings. I was hoping a swing up on UC to reload short but didn't happen.Well its just probability game.Price does not always do what you think might do.I am totally cool with that since I operate on assumption that I don't know the future to make money.Its just random distribution of winners and losses.

I'm thinking the A/U might want to re-test R78 (76 cent level) before resuming rise. I also closed a long position on it yesterday, although I realized the odds were in favour of further gains due to very low probability of no US interest rate increase, I decided not to risk an unpleasant surprise, as I've been burned too many times by spikes going both ways on big news days. P/A now looking promising for a short to .76 level.

Davit, I've noticed with my charts on some pairs, such as this one, my levels are off from your pivots by more than they are on some other pairs. Of course a lot of us have commented on that, and I will continue playing with settings to improve sync. Only mention so you know I'm aware of my discrepancy. Also working on my background colour behind news items, it seems I have to alter each pair individually.

I've been watching your videos and have learned more in a couple of months here than in several years previously. Thanks for sharing your knowledge.

Just change the background color once then save as template and use that on all pairs. Discrepancy of pivots is caused by broker time.

TRY this

Get into indy settings. Set brokers candle to FALSE. This was the trick/key to being able adjust the pivots up and down for me.

Set the week to latest week on Choose H1 start candle/finish candle as follows:

'Choose H1 start candle': 2016 06 19 05:00

'Choose H1 finish candle': 2016 06 24 05:00

(5.00 a.m. may not work on your chart so try different hours till pivots line up).

Fiddle with the hour on your 'Choose H1 start candle/finish' settings to get it to line up with Davits U/C chart pivots. 5 a.m. was the hour that worked on my chart. When you find the corresponding hour, set the start candle and finish candle to the exact same hour.

I like your attitude and you will succeed. Proper mental state is crucial. Green pips [quote] thanks...and one down... i watched the all of mark douglas after you posted it the other week..i looked up the full clip on you tube...wont put the whole summary here but it really hit home when he gave the analogy of how you would feel if you put your money in a slot machine and lose ..you dont feel much at all but for some reason in the market we take it to heart like it was personal...also i liked how he put it that we have to change our minds to understand we are on the otherside of the coin when we play the markets..we are like the casino...

Good going Gomad. Wish you success

When I started there was nobody to teach me anything and after losing thousands of dollars frustrations, even depression and despair I finally broke the shell.

If I had a real teacher that would cut my losses significantly and exhilarate my growth. But such is life and I am sure lot of traders went through same scenario I went through.

Finally out of AN +769 pips Had to wait patiently on this since I and many others did not anticipate NZD strength to continue weeks on.

Anyway I am out and happy freed up lots of margin!

AS you noticed below 38S I stopped adding.No point then since price was getting close to my SL $$ I set aside for this trade not pips and luckily came close but enough room to wait longer..

{quote} G'day my good friend Davit Thank you for remembering your pupils with such concern. I feel honored. Still up 7.44% As you know I was up over 9% and then I fell to 4% after my very next trade. I built a large position on GC last week. I was in a fair amount of draw down late in the night of the 14th and I decided to close out for fear that it could be worse when I woke up the next morning. From that time to today it has continued to go south. I did reload the next morning and then I got out far too early. Such is hindsight! {image} It took...

I am glad you are still alive account wise. Its obvious that you need to work on your mental side in trading. Read Mark Douglas books and watch as many videos you can by him.

In short you have a task that you need to improve.

Try focusing on pairs with less ADR until you become proficient regards

Well all the anticipation and expectation of another Fed statement has passed and not much has really changed. A slightly more hawkish statement, but still data dependent - so the possibility of a Dec hike is still on and I wouldn't be surprised if Yellen repeats the move of Dec 2015, with a similar hike in Dec 16. Aside from the news, the build up to yesterday had left several pairs in great positions. Like Davit, I was short EG and UC, as well as short small positions in AC and ACHF. I closed the EG for around +50 pips as price action was sideways...

Nice going. Very solid trading! I am sure you are up nicely this month! 🙌

I think EG is heading lower 85-84 so selling makes sense in case it breaks you are on right side but don't do both. Always go with the direction you anticipate the BO one way to maximize slow moving pair is increasing the lot size so 30pip move would equal 100pip move on faster pair.

Evening Davit, I have been reading a lot of the subject matter that you have recommended: in particular Scott Carney's material on harmonics. As a result, it is amazing how it connects to your WP and R/S pivots. My findings only support the significance of the positive zone (61-100) for entering positions that will provide us an edge for a high probability trade. My question to you: may I post a chart that shows how harmonics produces a PRZ that directly coincides with your weekly pivots? If your response is no, then I completely understand and...

Yes I would like that but I knew this already which is the reason why I wanted you guys to read about harmonics and Scott Carney

Davit, I am using a free trial of SnagIt for the first time, and not for certain how this post will come out. Let's give it a try anyhow. I know this is old hat to you, but I found it very convincing and exciting how accurate your WP and R/S pivots prove to be as the basis for your trading methodology. Thanks for all that you do for us, TX {image}

Looks good basically you have AB-CD pattern projection there. Its important to recognize that patterns do fail as well which is why there is so much emphases on price action and fundemetal news. CNtrader calls it a behavior, Anyway pivots simplify lot of things but its important to understand the logic behind. Its like drawing a figure with added benefit of knowing the skeleton the anatomy. One artist drawing without that knowledge and another with knowledge with equal talent one with knowledge will execute much better art or at least great figure drawing.

Anyway keep learning

I think I am going to make reading "Trading in the Zone" a requirement reading to trade this thread. Market is driven by emotion/ a sentiment and one must master his/hers before becoming proficient in it. System alone not enough.

Its a random distribution of winners and losses so one you fear and don't take is most likely the winner but you could not have known that in advance hence why we tackle great opportunities
Its just probability game.

Should AN retrace gonna buy the Aussie against the small brother NZD
Most likely Nov rate cut is looming and market usually prices that before the event so seeing .700 is realistic
Waiting for good spot after retrace
Regret getting out of my massive positions early at 460 getting in lower would be a bonus

AC is getting close to range top. Should Saudis, Iranians and Russians struck a deal on oil this Weds this could topple rather quick.

I get lot of PM's of members thanking me how much they are making. Recently got one that was outstanding

Without mentioning a name member on this thread made 28k in 3 months and is making 1k per day trading this system

I have no reason to doubt since I have seen his account results previous trades here.

Only sharing this because I insist people take this thread seriously or simply trade somewhere else.

This is getting close but could push lower then 61S

As always wait TDI to turn North and 15min candle become green. Best when you have 15 30 h1 going same direction.

This last step will prevent getting in too early.

Watch anglator arrows for easy reference.

Great trading Davit. Closed +320 pips EG short and +100 pips Long GA. Still long EA and remaining piece of GA. In slight drawdown on AC and ACHF, but positions are light and importantly still over 70% winners on average. Account growth 27% this month, so third straight month of double gains.

You are a star Pivot trader brother!

Got stopped out on EA myself with minor gain.

Nice going! Keep the momentum going 🙌

Still waiting for EC to break 48 so far 3 times came close,,,,,Got too many on this I am waiting for home run but doesn't always happen.

GBPCHF Powerful setup (Daily) {image}

Yassou Afarensis

Just want to add my inputs on this pair. While daily may look bullish to me its hitting a wall on lower TF anglator sideways TDI hooking down and major WP ATM

I ask myself simple question. Do I have an edge if I go long? I think 50/50 and because of that no trade. I prefer trades that are 61-100 zone thus have the edge on your side.

Regards

Just a reminder that I don't trade daily candles max candle I look for signal is H4. Why?

Because you can have 300 pips opposite move what transpired day before. Bull candle followed by engulfing bear candle. This happens a lot because forex is dynamic with news coming out all the time Draghi speaking etc etc. We can't assume continuity what has transpired.

This does not mean you happen to take a trade example AN at 300 and keeps going up you should get out.No you should stay on but again entry is most important.Catching swing lows tops allows distance and chance for home run.

Furthermore notice price bounced off at 38S which suggest there is room for price to drive to 61S even 78-100 so putting all together no trade for me.

Evening Davit, I may be mistaken, but I believe you may take positions on the H1 or M30 as long they are in the positive zone (61-100), and supported by PA and location. However, would it be correct to say that you often spot possibilities on the H4, and move down to the H1 or M30 to actually place your trades. Later, TX

I take trades 15min 30 which is my favorite and up to H4. When H4 is in same direction as lower TF you have higher probability set up however most swings end up often quicker then 4hours. This I explained on 1st page.

regards

Look at EC swing drop. that's 30min chart. in 3hrs 6x30min candles price dropped 120pips. So if you were trading exclusively H4 you would of been LATE

I hope you guys understand that in essence I am trading swings and H4 or daily often are too lagging.

Thanks Pret, I tried changing as described. Please see below but still the same. I'm using a london broker. it was set to monthly and 0000. {image} please read the page 1 again if you have not.Pivots must be set to weekly.

try this

Get into indy settings. Set brokers candle to FALSE. This was the trick/key to being able adjust the pivots up and down for me.

Set the week to latest week on Choose H1 start candle/finish candle as follows:

'Choose H1 start candle': 2016 06 19 05:00

'Choose H1 finish candle': 2016 06 24 05:00

(5.00 a.m. may not work on your chart so try different hours till pivots line up).

Fiddle with the hour on your 'Choose H1 start candle/finish' settings to get it to line up with Davits U/C chart pivots. 5 a.m. was the hour that worked on my chart. When you find the corresponding hour, set the start candle and finish candle to the exact same hour.

Hi Davit, I took the EA long trade earlier but it turned nasty, held it as it bounced of the 78 and cleared with a 10pip loss to await a better set up. Was the trade ok? I think I should be focused on bounce points for all 3 pairs there at the same time eu,au and ea as eu hadn't set up for a bounce. cheers {image}

Please don't trade real money until you understand what you are doing.

Price can turn from 61 78 100 usually when 61 fails next stop is 78 then 100 so you must compensate this by reducing your lot size and entering in increments.

Other then that trade just didn't work for you...or could have if you done what I described.

Please read the thread or you will be removed.Casual effort =poor results.

Let me state this again.People who put their time make money furthermore its on my 1st page disclaimer.If you don't have enough experience you will struggle with this.

I will not hold your hand on every step of your development.Requires work on your part.

could you use my template as is?Anglator wrong side and the whole thing looks like a mess.How difficult is it to download the template indicators and trade as intended.

you are not scoring points on me that's for sure.Anyway green pips

I see based on your activity you are trading posting 3 different systems.

Not going to work. You must choose one and focus on it or you will be in perpetual conflict with yourself.

This is almost opposite to TMS and everything Emmanuel stands for. Daily Trading using SMA is totally different in its approach. You got to get your head clear what you want to do.

Hi Davit My first trade using your system in my live account. Thank you and all those who have contributed to its development. Love Mark Douglas videos . Keep up the good work. Closed all trades maybe should have kept a couple open ?? {image} great start Welcome! scored points by watching MD

AC has ton of correction left to go.You can wait for a bounce then get in again. Once AU gets hummered which is soon you will see more slide on Aussie crosses specially EA (in case of EA up) are those points or pips at the bottom of your chart😂 I can't believe I get moronic questions here specially someone with yellow tag.

Hey IBar51

Thank you. I'm on it right now.

It gets really interesting from 2part on. Most people here are clueless how price moves. This is critical to get which explains why spikes happen.

Its the reason why I spread my trades and reason why I do what I do.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Here is another illustration of how the self-image operates. Picture us living inside two boxes. The line farthest out, the solid line, represents real or realistic limits. The dotted line, in the first drawing shown tightly confining Self, represents self-imposed limits. The area between the two is your area or range of under-utilized potential. As you discover the means of strengthening and liberating your self-image, you move the dotted line closer to the solid line, permitting greater use of your true potential.

{quote} I found that is very interesting too. Whenever I saw a spike when big drop, I am thinking about MM and I can visualize all the stop loss for retail traders. Now I do not put stop loss at all but I only select low ATR pairs around 100.

or you can do what I do set your stop not in pips but actual dollar amount.

Example you decide to short AC set aside 200 budget for that trade. Break up lots to mini lots. Enter as needed and as long as your 200 dollar is not consumed in drawdown you are ok. Once you hit 200 then you get out.

200 is just example you can decide whatever based on your account size. Stops are necessary no matter how you do it.

Great zone and fits the system not going to share my every live trade but will on occasion. Don't want this becoming free signal service thread. You got the tools and should not be hard finding set ups and taking trades.

Hi Davit and all, I am going to do this once for any non believers or those that do not follow the rules. I have been trading my demo account for 5 weeks now very aggressively only taking trades after 61. This is all using Davit's method, nothing else. Attached is my account. Demo started at 10,000. Now at 31,293. I have been trading my live account for 2 weeks now, same trades just not as aggressive or the same amounts. . Live account started at 4,000. Now at 5,523, that is a 38% growth in 2 weeks. This is as stress free as it gets. I still have...

That's my man! 🙌🎉😊🎉 38% in 2 weeks trading micro lots. Lot of people can't even hit that in 1 year! Just great!

What is important to see not so much upward curve but that I took 110 losses and graph hardly reflects that which means I kept my losses small! and pushed my winners higher.

I am more proud of the fact that I kept losses small which automatically made my account grow when you hit above 70% winning rate

I've been reading about harmonics since the weekend the two books you mentioned by Scott Carney, 100% not a coincidence. I managed to find one Sunday night on EUR/GBP, it's fell 100pips since. Still not great at spotting them, but I'm getting there.

Does take time but pivots make it easy. I just wanted you guys to know the underlining structure of pivots. It's like understanding music theory which helps composition.

AU broke that damn pivot 38r Yeahhh and my EA is flying high now thanks friend.I tried many times to explain her what I do but no break.She Just does not understand that there are other ways to make money then having a regular job. lots of people as soon as you tell them you are aspiring trader they tell you "you are delusional" funny part more people tell me I am delusional harder I try to disprove them.I think once your account gets certain level it becomes lot more easier to make money in forex.Having small account you are in constant fear of losing it which is exactly opposite metal state to have for successful trading.Fear is the worst enemy for the trader.Anyway I told her hang in there for few years more if I am delusional proven that is then I will quit.

I am planning to trade for living and for that aggressively building equity without stress and worry

Need to get certain amount so 7-10% gain a month will cover all my expenses. Not there yet(account size) but should not be long. I do get trading job offers almost once every month on my PM and so far declined. Latest was a German trading company but you are right I feel better risking my money then have to be responsible for hundreds of others. I came to stage in my trading that its getting easier and easier making serious % lot has to do with my effort of constantly trying to improve.

Anyway you are doing fine and happy journey to freedom.

Don't be hasty to short UC EC or any CAD pair yet. Usually Fridays is dumping day, profit taking that means oil bulls jumping ship and crude may drop as low as 45 its already heading south. Stick with high probability trades and you would do great if someone can post crude chart with my template that would be fantastic. Just need to see the levels

Hi Davit Listening to MD and he says basically you need to take every trade which is fine as long as the pairs are not correlated and fit your into your system if the pairs correlate do you trade more than 1. what is your view no he does not say you need to take every trade. He says you need to take every trade with an EDGE since you don't know which one would be a winner or loser and over good sample size your edge shows profit provided you have genuine edge.

I did not hear anything about correlation from him. I often trade correlated pairs, Just this week shorted EC and UC and some here even shorted AC NC UC and EC Danger is about over exposure and if you can handle in terms of account size then its fine. Its just another trade.

Ok lets talk realism Barry .I don't want you to go and start taking every trade on every pair you see in the zone 61-100 cross the board.

Prefer you focus medium level ADR pairs 50-130 max beyond that you better have your SL in place because GN GA GJ can blow 300pip move against you in a fly.

Please read the thread and honestly if you have less then 2 years experience in forex just try something else because you need screen time to read price action correctly.

We also take the trade that shows the move with PA and TDI confirmation so its not automatic random trades.

As I and many traders already done you don't need to trade lots of pairs just need to trade the right pair at right time and your account will grow without much stress.

There are also fundemetal aspects as well.I am not going to trade a pair I know nothing.I like CAD because I know lot about it same with AUD NZD GU EU USD in short majors.Don't trade the Yen but that's personal preference since BOJ has a history of interference and rather not deal with that.

I hope that was helpful

So lets go over when and how to take a trade

EF

Price at 61R= is not an automatic trade needs to confirm with PA and TDI

PA 30 solid bear next 30 rejected tail on bull side suggesting bear move is not over yet.

TDI sloping down

This is probably most profitable thread at FF 🤑 and most rigid with tight rules LOVE IT

Why on this thread some make mega pips and others get banned or can't follow instructions

Please read on

The Bet

"We're going to raise traders like they raise turtles in Singapore." That is what one of the world's famous commodities speculators, Richard Dennis, said to his good friend William Eckhardt, an equally successful trader. Back in 1983, a debate that had been brewing between the pair took a serious turn when standing in a turtle farm in Singapore. The now-legendary bet was made between the two regarding the age-old argument of nature versus nurture, and one's ability to trade. Dennis strongly believed that anyone with the right mentoring and nurturing could be transformed into a formidable trader, whereas Eckhardt believed that it was down to nature: one was either born to trade, or not.

The Turtles

And so the experiment began. Large adverts were put in The Wall Street Journal inviting anyone with an interest in trading to apply to become a mentee under the guidance of Dennis. The ad specified that Dennis would teach the group his trading methods and give each mentee a trading account loaded with a million dollars. After a rigorous intelligence and aptitude test and an interview session with both traders, applicants were whittled down from over 1000 to just 13. The Turtles were born.

Who Is Richard Dennis?

Dennis was known by the nickname "The Prince of the Pits" — the pits being the chaotic trading floor that traders call "home". He had earned this by turning a few thousand dollars into several hundred million by his mid-thirties. Dennis put his own money on the line during the experiment, making a clear statement that he not only fully understood the reasons behind his phenomenal success, but that he was able to pass this information on, turning the recipient into a formidable trader. After an initial two-week training period where they were trained in Dennis' strategies and methodology, the Turtles went on to make an average return of over 80 percent a year over the next four-and-a-half years.

What Was Needed To Be A Turtle?

The mentees selected had varying levels of intelligence and trading experience. Some were even complete novices like Curtis Faith, who went on to be the most successful Turtle. They were all, however, screened based on two key areas: firstly to be able to understand the markets as a general trading requirement, and secondly all had the common trait of a good knowledge of probability mathematics, gaming theory and strategy. Careers amongst the Turtles ranged from a blackjack and backgammon player to an accountant.

Why These Traits?

The relevance of this becomes clear when one understands the theory behind market movement and long-term trading success. In 1983, just as is the case today and something I understand very well, the Turtles learned that any single moment in the market is random but over a period of time patterns in the market repeat themselves. Dennis, in the two-week training period, would have explained his understanding of market movement. Being mentored by someone with such unrivaled success should, in theory, have made it easier to absorb his strategies and knowledge. Blind faith should have been placed in him, to put it simply.

Davit's Fundamental Posts since beginning Pivot Trading

Surprising Results

It may then come as a surprise that after the initial one-month trial period, during which the traders put into practice the knowledge they had been given, they produced a varying set of results. From the very early stages, Faith showed an ability to follow rules without any form of deviation, but some of the Turtles found following Dennis' rules a real challenge. What is so elusive about mastering trading that, after one month of trial trading, such varying results were produced?

Challenges Of The Human Thought Process

As Curtis Faith explains in his book in more detail, the answer lies in "trading psychology" and the irrational thought innate in the decision-making process of each individual. Hope, fear, greed and disappointment all play their part in the failure of the vast majority who turn to trading. A classic mistake made by rookies is to let losing trades run, in the hope of clawing back what has been taken by the market, and to get out early from winning trades, in fear of losing profits to the market. The Turtles were made to understand that these human characteristics influenced trading and market movement, and were given the strategies to repeatedly capitalize on them.

Why Were Some Turtles Less Successful?

The answer lies in the fact that conceptually, trading is easy to understand, but putting what you have learned into action is where the challenge lies. This is where the different members of the Turtles came unstuck producing varying results. Despite all the Turtles being given the same training, the aforementioned human traits such as fear played a part when a trade had to be put on. What separated Curtis Faith was his ability to keep it simple and follow the rules.

I read the book and still have by Curtis Faith. The main reason most Turtles failed because they didn't follow rules and instructions and these were not stupid people they were teachers, engineers, computer programmers etc in short smart however it takes more than being smart you must comply.

Results here speak volumes

I had one guy here Chiko all he did was scalping using my system. I tried to tell him this is not suitable for scalping and the guy kept scalping and guess what he stopped posting long ago. His lost an opportunity to learn to trade properly and gain mega pips instead he did what he wanted disregarding rules and he is gone.

The guys who stuck around and apply the rules win pips day in day out. That's just the truth nice way to start here 👍 and you got the right template 😊

thank you

That clears lot of things for me. Won't surprise me correction to 38R 46 which should push UC back to 32 and another opportunity to unload

Love to see EU below 12 which should push EA below 47 for reload longs make sure you download news indicator. its a great tool to know always what is going on as a trader you can not effort not to know the news. Example I talked about Oil deal several times and it paid rather handsomely by Shorting UC and EC.

While technical part of trading is necessary one can not rule out fundamentals and news

Not much going on but have been watching EG and PA is turning south and I am in 4 positions

Don't think it will break WP and my aim is short 30pip distance x4 not the best trade ATM but I could get out with minor gains.

Still watching EA to break below 47 and create opportunity on long side for reload
4656 38S where I am looking for correction

Crude most likely will go into correction and happens a lot on Fridays. That's great for CAD bulls like me 😊

46 is likely and even 45.5

hi all...hi davit jus wanna say thnx again,,my results after 2 weeks on demo,,ddnt realize it cuz was focused on trades,,results speak for themselves {image} {image}

Hi Gomab

I have missed feelings about demo results.Its psychologically easy to press buy and sell standard lot but its totally different mind game when doing the same with your hard earned cash.

If you are doing it to convince yourself that my system truly has an Edge then I think you have proven that to yourself 😊 Good job there.

Now I suggest you open live account and trade mini lots so you can train psychological aspect of trading as well.This is the harder part.Watch Mark Douglas videos and please read "Trading in the Zone" Need to have both technical skill and psychology of trading come together for successful trading.

Cheers and good start

Davit's Fundamental Posts since beginning Pivot Trading

Update: Monday, January 1, 2018

by the way in real live trading 7k account should never trade with 1 standard lot. That's too much exposure. 100pip loss will put you in -1k that's about 13% account loss on single trade recipe for disaster not even touching upon heart attack stress and panics.

You should be trading .10-.5 mini lots until you have what it takes both skill, metal and account size to trade standard lot.

Follow up on AUD based trades this week. ACAD +1200 pips {image} ACHF +250 pips {image} Just looking at this trade though - you can see the power of pivot levels and the S/R zones. Even though price had traded earlier in the week at and around the weekly pivot, once the move had been made to the upside of R61-R78, probability then stacked for a move lower. With hindsight, I exited too early as there was a strong downward move in the wake of the news around oil supply levels - but green pips are always welcomed and we move onto the next trade opportunity....

{quote} Amazing. As I've been a (part-time) intraday trading for a couple of years now I'm finding it hard to hold on to trades. In other words, swing trading. Even when all the signs are still there it makes me feel anxious to leave a trade run overnight. But by gathering all the wisdom nuggets you, Davit and some others are leaving behind I'm getting to the point where I can trade without 'fear', like MD says. That being said. I was planning to let my EF and GF trades go, as long as needed. But something made them pop up and hit my TPs. Not sure...

When you do it enough winning trades your confidence increases and that allows letting the trades do their thing but reasonable TP is fine

what is possible? and what limits we impose on ourselves below where everyone should try to achieve.max potential from the book

Psycho-Cybernetics, A New Way to Get More Living Out of Life Maxwell Maltz

EDITOR'S NOTE: Here is another illustration of how the self-image operates. Picture us living inside two boxes. The line farthest out, the solid line, represents real or realistic limits. The dotted line, in the first drawing shown tightly confining Self, represents self-imposed limits. The area between the two is your area or range of under-utilized potential. As you discover the means of strengthening and liberating your self-image, you move the dotted line closer to the solid line, permitting greater use of your true potential.

I posted about this correction 10hrs ago worked like a clock

Even though I have lower limits in case of spikes happen I believe 38S will hold fundamentally going to go higher on this pair. Possible break of WP to 61R at 4860
In general correction always happen principle of EW 5 wave patterns. This allows taking TP earlier like I did then reload lower price to continue the trend on higher time frame like daily

I am really proud of you guys. You have proven to me how profitable trading can be

Love seeing those winners and set ups. Just takes 3-4 batch of trades to hit 10%+ a month. Compound that few years and you are golden plug your number % and see what is possible

<http://www.forex21.com/forex-compounding-calculator/>

Some told me year ago that's not possible to hit consistent % every month. Well I proven it can be done. I have hit average around 20% so far 2016 and lowest around 11% and highest 48% and lots of 20's and 30's around 20% average out.

So believe truly you can do it. Its in the mind. You can't take advise from a loser because he has not experienced MAX potential nor understand trading in general.

happy piping

First chart contribution from me, +68 pips but also to show support for your ideas and to thank you for carrying on with this great thread. I hope to contribute more in the future. I moved my take profit as it picked up some nice momentum. This was not my only trade this week I had several others but those trades are in a different account so if it is ok with you I will upload them later on when on my home computer. {image} {image}

Welcome Lisat

I don't know why your anglator is on left side. You can move to right so its more clear.

I generally don't take trades on exactly WP. You had one that worked but if you take 20 trades at WP you most likely will show a loss. So to me its about hammering best trades hardest to generate most pips 61-100 zones. If you stick with this basic idea you will have around 70% winning trades and that's staggering %

regards

Must go now. I'll see you guys later

Got about 6 AU shorts carrying over next week. Can we see 7550 or even 75 by Fri NFP? Yes very likely since its forecast to be positive.

If that should be the case this sets the stage for Dec hike and market will pump the USD up that means all majors will get slaughtered against USD maybe less so the Yen.

So part of trading is to have a overall view what's coming so you are on the right side with fundamentals.
